ACKNOWLEDGEMENTS

This work would not have been possible, much less imaginable, without the work of the wo/men who have gone before me: speaking truth to power, hearing voices into speech, and creating spaces of new ways of being in the world.

I am also deeply indebted to my advisor, Fernando F. Segovia, for his continually supportive and directive feedback that simultaneously “showed me the ropes” and encouraged me to find my voice in this work; to Elisabeth Schüssler Fiorenza who threw me a life-preserver as I was drowning in the sea of malestream scholarship and ethos of graduate studies, and who has continued to believe in me ever since; and to Robert Barsky for giving me space to make the connections in writing that I was making in my mind. I am also keenly aware that I am able to speak of women claiming their own voices and lives because my parents, Jennings and Marianne, taught me to do likewise.
