

Children at WAR

Peter W. Singer,

Senior Fellow in Foreign Policy
Studies, Brookings Institution;
Director, Brookings Project on U.S.
Policy Towards the Islamic World

4:10 p.m., Thursday, March 17
Moore Room, Vanderbilt University
Law School

Sponsored by the Robert Penn Warren Center for the Humanities and the Vanderbilt Institute for Public Policy Studies

Peter W. Singer, author of Children at War and Corporate Warriors: The Rise of the Privatized Military Industry, is an expert on twenty-first century warfare, foreign policy, national security, and terrorism. According to Singer, there are now as many as 300,000 children under eighteen years old presently serving as combatants in 40 percent of the world's armies. Singer's lecture will examine this recent development on the modern battlefield and its ramifications. He received his Ph.D. from Harvard University in 2001.

For more information, call 615-343-6060 or visit www.vanderbilt.edu/rpw_center.

